The Left Right Game

READ ALOUD

Guests sit in a circle and the host reads the story aloud. Pass the gift to the left or to the right every time you hear the word. Whoever holds it at the end keeps it.

The morning of the shower, the maid of honor woke up and knew RIGHT away it would be a big day. She grabbed the gift bag on the LEFT side of the table, then the card on the RIGHT, and LEFT the house in a hurry. Halfway down the street she realized she had LEFT the cake at home. She turned RIGHT, then LEFT, then RIGHT again, and raced back to the kitchen. The cake was RIGHT where she LEFT it. Back in the car, the map app said “turn LEFT,” but the party was to the RIGHT, so she did what felt RIGHT. At the venue, the bride’s aunt waved from the LEFT door and the cousins waved from the RIGHT one. “Gifts go on the LEFT table, snacks on the RIGHT,” said the aunt. RIGHT then, the bride walked in, and everyone cheered. The guests found their seats, LEFT and RIGHT of the bride, and the games began. During bingo, the guest on the LEFT called out first, but the guest on the RIGHT had the winning card. Was that RIGHT? The host checked the list and said, “RIGHT! You win.” By the end of the party, only one slice of cake was LEFT. The bride looked LEFT, looked RIGHT, and took it with a smile. Everyone agreed it was the RIGHT call. Now, before anyone can leave, there is one gift LEFT to give. Whoever is holding it RIGHT now: it’s yours.
